ABSTRACT

An improved facestock for forming conformable pressure-sensitive labels for automated dispensing. The facestock is an extruded multilayer film structure, including a core layer formed of propylene and an ethylene-containing polyolefin. The coextruded biaxially oriented structure exhibits the squeezability and softness characteristics required for a conformable label while maintaining sufficient stiffness for automated dispensing.

5